

Contributed photo

TOP MOOSE LODGE

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Greenville Moose Family Center 276 was named top lodge of the year at Moose International Convention earlier this month in Nashville. Members of the club knew their lodge was in the running when they learned from Moose International that it was one of five eligible for the Shining Star Award. On July 3, the top selection was announced before 6,000 attendees at the convention. The Greenville organization was selected out of 1,800 lodges in the fraternity worldwide. Already celebrating the 100th year of its charter in Greenville, receiving this award "topped it off." When Gov. Richard Stralko accepted the award, he said, "Thank you for this honor. Our members, all working together in our lodge and community made this happen." The award is based upon what a lodge does to support the Moose Fraternity objectives, which are grow in membership, support Moose charities, support your community, and enjoy life and family. From left are Stan Adams, Pennsylvania regional manager; Paul Chianese, Lodge 276 administrator; Richard Stralko, Lodge 276 governor; and Denny Berry, past PA state president.